"Listening and Speaking in the Classroom"

The skills of listening and speaking are vital to communication and comprehension. This interactive workshop offers a discussion of current best practices and demonstration of strategies across grade levels that will help students develop their listening and speaking skills. Attendees are asked to bring in various picture books, chapter books, and/or content area textbooks for use in strategy application. New picture books and chapter books will also be available for your use.

Jonathan's teaching experience has included teaching grades 1-8 in a one-room school all the way up to new teaching in the Education Division at Martin Luther College in New Ulm, MN. He currently teaches courses in the Language Arts block: Teaching Reading, Children's Literature, and Teaching Language Arts. He is currently wrapping up his dissertation for his PhD in Curriculum and Instruction in Literacy Education at the University of Minnesota – Twin Cities.
